CHECKLIST OF SHROPSHIRE FUNGI

Introduction

The county of Shropshire (VC40) is large and landlocked and contains all major habitats, apart from coast and dune. These include the uplands of the Clees, Stiperstones and Long Mynd with their associated heathland, forested land such as the Forest of Wyre and the Mortimer Forest, the lowland bogs and meres in the north of the county, and agricultural land scattered with small woodlands and copses. This diversity makes Shropshire unique.

The Shropshire Fungus Group has been in existence since 1992. The initial aim was to produce a fungus flora for the county. This aim has not yet been realised for a number of reasons, chief amongst these are manpower and cost. The group has however collected many records by trawling the archives, contributions from interested individuals and groups, and by field meetings. It is these records that are published here.

The first Shropshire checklist was published in 1997. A further edition was published in 2011. Many more records have now been added and more than 50,000 of these have now been uploaded to the national database, the Fungus Record Database for Britain and Ireland (FRDBI). During recent years molecular biology, i.e. DNA analysis has been applied to fungal classification. This has brought about some changes in the position of many species within the taxonomic framework. Many species have been moved to different genera and some genera have been split e.g. Coprinus has been divided into Coprinus which is in Agaricaceae and Coprinellus, Coprinopsis, and Parasola which are now in Psathyrellaceae.

There is no single authoritative source to consult to establish current nomenclature. This version of the checklist relies heavily on Index Fungorum, Species Fungorum and the NBN Atlas to determine current usage and classification. FRDBI has recently undergone a major upgrade and is fully available online.

Fungus names in the Shropshire records have been completely updated but a field in the database has been kept with the original recorded name so that any errors can be readily traced. A section of these name changes has been included in this publication. Such is the speed of change that the names and taxonomy of some species in this Checklist will already be out of date.

In this Checklist the information is necessarily sparse; the records in the database can contain much more specific information on the site, (including grid reference) and details of who found the specimen and who identified it. If a fungus is rare there may be details of who confirmed the identification and if a dried specimen has been kept. In some instances material may be sent to Kew Royal Botanical Gardens for formal identification, in which case a record of the Kew specimen number and the person confirming the specimen is kept as part of the record for that species.

The Checklist places each species within its taxonomic framework, with its associated organism or host where recorded, (many records do not contain this information and "Unknown" has been entered for the associated organism), and the number of times it has been recorded. The taxonomic framework is outlined with page numbers for each family. The term incertae sedis is defined as "uncertain affinities" which means that its lineage is not fully understood. Some very basic analysis has been done to give an overview of fungi in Shropshire. This information is given after the checklist. BAP = Biodiversity Action Plan. Species listed under this plan are designated for conservation action by the UK government. A fully searchable version of the Checklist in spreadsheet format is available on the Shropshire Fungus Group website.

NAME AS RECORDED

Acrocordia epipolaea
Agaricus abruptibulbus
Agaricus albertii
Agaricus campestris
Agaricus deylii
Agaricus essettei
Agaricus fissuratus
Agaricus haemorrhoidarius
Agaricus koelerionensis
Agaricus macrosporus
Agaricus maleolens
Agaricus mediofuscus
Agaricus nivescens
Agaricus placomyces
Agaricus praeclaresquamosus
Agaricus pseudovillaticus
Agaricus purpurellus
Agaricus silvaticus
Agaricus silvaticus var. pallens
Agaricus silvicola
Agaricus squamuliferus
Agaricus sylvaticus var. pallens
Agaricus urinascens
Agaricus vaporarius
Agaricus variegans
Agaricus variegatus
Agaricus xanthodermus var. griseus
Agrocybe semiorbicularis
Akenomyces costatus
Albugo tragopogonis
Alectoria jubata var. chalybeiformis
Allophylaria filicum
Alnicola scolecina
Alysidium dubium
Amanita citrina
Amanita excelsa
Amanita inaurata
Amanita muscaria
Amanita rubescens
Amanita solitaria
Amanita spissa
Amanita strangulata
Amanita verna
Amanitopsis crocea
Amanitopsis fulva
Amanitopsis vaginata

Indicator Species

Axiophytes or “worthy plants” have, for some time, been used by botanists to indicate special habitats that are in need of protection. Sites can be intensively surveyed by a wealth of local experts and a fairly complete list of species can be produced. Many counties have a list of axiophytes and by comparing these two lists the number of axiophytes can be determined and the value of the site assessed.

Fungi pose a few problems. At the moment the only way for amateur field mycologists to identify a species is to examine the fruit body. Many species are difficult to identify and it often takes hours of work with a microscope to assign a correct identity. Given that there are over 12,000 species in the British Isles the task of identification is daunting. The fungus kingdom is split into many groups and each one often requires a specialist to correctly identify finds.

Fungi are quite unlike vascular plants. Most species are dependent upon the weather and/or the moisture content of the substratum to produce fruit bodies and in dry years many will not fruit at all. Others are more demanding and require precise weather condition throughout the year and so these may only fruit occasionally often with many years of absence.

A site in Scotland has been continually surveyed over a period of more than 20 years. Each year new species are found, and remarkably, the number of new species found each year has not diminished. A mycological site survey therefore would require many years of work, many specialists and probably vast amounts of money. This renders this method of site evaluation impractical at present and so other methods must be sought. These do not rely upon the prior identification and listing of indicator species.

Unimproved Grassland

Unimproved grassland refers to land where there has not been any significant degree of agricultural intensification i.e. disturbance of the soil with machinery and/or the application of chemicals. If they are well drained, nutrient poor, well grazed and with a good moss understorey then they provide the ideal habitat for a wealth of grassland fungi.

A number of methods have been devised for evaluating these rare environments. CHEG method is all about the main groups of grassland fungi i.e. the Clavariaceae (Fairy Clubs), Hygrocybe (Waxcaps), Entolomaceae (Pink gills) and Geoglossaceae (Earth tongues). This, for the amateur, is not practical because some of the members of these groups are difficult to identify e.g. Entoloma. A more straightforward method is to assess the habitat purely by the number of Hygrocybe species that can be found there. Waxcap species are the best known and easiest to identify and are considered to be suitable indicators of mycologically rich grasslands. The area is designated as follows:-

Of national importance 17 - 32 species (11 - 20 during a single visit.)

Of regional importance 9 - 16 species (6 - 10 during a single visit.)

Of local importance 4 - 8 species (3 - 5 during a single visit.)

Of no importance 1 - 3 species (1 - 2 during a single visit.)

This will depend upon the weather and the season, and also grasslands which are good for Hygrocybe species may not be a good Entoloma site.

Woodlands

Woodlands are a completely different problem. The saprophytes and parasites are sometimes very choosy on the type of wood on which they feed and many mycorrhizal fungi are even more specific with which species they will associate. The species of trees within a wood, therefore, will determine, to a very large extent the fungus flora of that habitat and so every different type of woodland would require a different set of fungal axiophytes.

This can be achieved (see English Nature Research Report No. 597 - Developing tools for assessing fungal interest in habitats No.1: beech woodland saprophytes.). This lists 30 species which the authors believe indicate a good beech wood habitat for fungi. The more of these fungi that they are found to have, the higher the rating, thus these woodlands can be placed in order of importance. This list only includes fungi which feed on bulky dead wood and does not include saprophytes on twigs and leafy debris.

Rare and endangered fungi in Shropshire. (Excluding BAP species).

Agarics and Boleti

Amanita lividopallescens – status vulnerable. 1 record in 2005 from Earl's Hill. Boletus fragrans – status near threatened. 1 record in 1904 from Benthall.

Boletus satanas – status rare. 2 records both around 1900, one from Ludlow, one from Barrow.

Camarophylloopsis micacea – status vulnerable. 1 record in 2008 from Benthall.

Coprinus sterquilinus – status vulnerable. 1 record in 2006 from Hopesay Hill.

Cortinarius cyanides – status vulnerable. 1 record in 1902 from Wenlock.

Cortinarius violaceus – status endangered. 3 recent records from the Forest of Wyre.

Cystoderma cinnabarinum – status rare. 1 record in 1905 from Shirlett.

Entoloma tjallingiorum – status vulnerable. 1 record in 1998 from Dudmaston Estate.

Hygrocybe calyptriformis – status vulnerable. 40 records from 1880 to 2005. This is probably not so vulnerable as was first thought.

Hygrophorus nemoreus – status vulnerable. 4 records all recent.

Leucopaxillus giganteus – status endangered. 12 records from 1880 to 2003.

Marasmius scorodonius – status rare. 1 record in 1999 from The Forest of Wyre.

Russula aurea – status vulnerable. 5 records from 1903 to 2000.

Squamanita paradoxa – status vulnerable. 6 records all in 2004 from various locations.

Ascomycota

Camarops polysperma – status vulnerable. 2 records in 1972 and 2005.

Jafneadelphus amethystinus – status vulnerable. 1 record in 1875 from Shrewsbury.

Otidea apophysata – status rare. 1 record in 1876 from Copthorne.

Pachyella violaceonigra – status rare. 3 records all recent the last one in 2004 from Severn Valley Country Park

Spathularia flavida – status vulnerable. 16 records the latest in 2008 from Dudmaston Estate.

Non Agaricoid Hymenomycetes (incl brackets, chanterelles & stipitates)

Clavaria greletii – status Endangered. 1 record in 2005 from The Forest of Wyre.

Clavariadelphus ligula – status extinct 1953. 1 record in 1905 from The Forest of Wyre.

Cotylidia undulata – status vulnerable. 1 record in 1913 from The Forest of Wyre.

Dacrymyces ovisporus – status vulnerable. 1 record in 1996 from The Forest of Wyre.

Perenniporia medulla-panis – status extinct 1854. There have been a number of records from different parts of the country from good mycologists since this date. Shropshire has 2 recent records the latest being in 2000 from Dudmaston.

Phellinus robustus – status rare. 8 records from 1995 to 2008. This last one is from Haughmond Hill.

Phellodon tomentosus – status endangered. 1 record also from Bomere in 1887.

Ramaria aurea – status threatened. 1 record in 1880 from Whitcliffe.

Ramaria botrytis s.l. – status vulnerable. 1 record in 1880 from Ludlow.

Ramaria formosa – status vulnerable. 1 record in 1999 from The Forest of Wyre.

Trametes suaveolens – status vulnerable. 4 records. 3 very old, 1 recent in 2007 from Whitcliffe Common.

Geastrum lageniforme – status extinct? 1 record in 2008 from Benthall recorded by an eminent mycologist.

Geastrum quadrifidum – status vulnerable. 2 records both recent. The latest in 2008 from Trefonen.

Ustilaginomycetes

Tilletia caries – status endangered. 2 records 1 very old the recent one in 1993 from Burwarton SO6185.

Conservation measures.

In order to protect any organism you need to know a) where it exists and b) what conditions are required to make it thrive.

a) Fungi are only seen and identified when in fruit otherwise they exist as a hidden mycelium. Most are unreliable in this respect. Although the factors which influence fruitbody production are poorly understood, it is thought to be governed in some part by the weather. Given the right conditions some species will fruit every year, others are more specific in the conditions that they require and may go for years and even decades between fruitings. One or two yearly surveys will only yield a fraction of the species that are present there. Take for example Dudmaston Estate, which has been surveyed regularly for over 30 years. The number of finds in any one visit averages between 100 and 200 species. The total number recorded to date is 648. New species are added to the list each year. Seven have been added this year(2010). Another factor in finding out which species are present in any give area is the expertise of the people doing the survey. Because of the difficulties in identification and the numbers of species involved, mycology is a field for specialists, much like entomology. At the present rate it will be many years before we begin to know how many species we have in Shropshire. We have, however identified a number of species i.e. the ones listed above.

b) Most fungi live parasitically or saprophytically on plants and plant debris and many are mycorrhizal with trees and other plants and so if we preserve the host we may preserve the fungus as well. Some live parasitically and saprophytically on animals and here the problem of conservation becomes more difficult.

The best protection that we can put in place is conservation of the habitat. Ecosystems such as ancient woodlands, heaths, unimproved pastures and short turf grassland must be preserved as much for fungi as for the other organisms that live there. Lichens are a separate issue and disused quarries, old churchyards, heath land, and woodland are all habitats essential for these organisms. They are also sensitive to air quality many disappearing in polluted areas.

It is therefore important to protect habitats and air quality in order to preserve our fungi. They are essential to all communities for without them the whole ecosystem will collapse.

Important sites for fungi in Shropshire.

Dudmaston Estate. Owned by the National Trust. Arguably the most visited site for fungi in the county. There are 5655 records from this site, including those from Comer Wood, representing 954 separate species.

Attingham Park. This is another National Trust property. There are 1203 records from this site, representing 498 separate species.

Brown Clee Hill. The eastern section is the one which has been best surveyed and is owned by Burwarton Estate. There are 2399 records from this site, representing 572 separate species, not including records from numerous nearby loctions.

The Forest of Wyre. Managed by the Forestry Commission and various private owners, much of it lying outside Shropshire. There are 2833 Shropshire records, representing 754 separate species, not including records from nearby locations.

The Stiperstones and The Bog. Managed by Natural England. This is a good place for grassland fungi. There are 475 Shropshire records, representing an astonishing 264 separate species.

The Long Mynd. Owned by the National Trust. Relatively rarely forayed, although the variety of place names there probably reduces the total of records significantly. Only 306 records, but 201 separate species.

Colemere Country Park. Managed by Natural England. The mixed woodland around the mere has a rich fungus flora. 1201 records here, 424 species.

Earl's Hill & Pontesford Hill. In part a Shropshire Wildlife Trust Reserve. Two adjoining hills, one bald, one wooded with a very good grassland meadow. 776 records from these, with 474 species.

Haughmond Hill and Abbey Wood. Adjacent sites separated by a road. Often very prolific. 969 recorded species and 368 species.

Wenlock Edge. Another rarely visited site. Almost all of the records pre-date this century, and most of those contemporary ones are of lichens. Only 230 records, of which 179 are of separate species.

The foregoing were all mentioned in the 2011 Checklist, but to these must be added Sowdley Wood, a recent addition to the Shropshire Fungus Group list of foray sites, but proving to offer a diverse range of specimens. 492 records since 2015, of which 233 separate species.

List of BAP species and their occurrence in Shropshire

Below is a list of all BAP species. Those which we have records of in Shropshire are highlighted in bold type with the date of the last record in parenthesis.

Amanita friabilis	Lyophyllum favrei
Armillaria ectypa	Microglossum olivaceum(1905)
Bankera fuligineoalba	Mycena renati
Battarrea phalloides(2020)	Myriostoma coliforme
Boletopsis perplexa	Nyssopsora echinata
Boletus immutatus (1997)	Phellodon confluens
Boletus pseudoregius	Phellodon melaleucus(1887)
Boletus paludosa	Phellodon niger
Boletus regius	Phellodon tomentosus
Boletus rhodopurpureus (1904)	Pholiota astragalina
Boletus satanus (1901)	Phylloporus pelletieri
Boletus torosus	Piptoporus quercinus
Calocybe onychina	Podoscypha multizonata
Cantharellus friesi	Poria punctata
Cantharellus melanoxeros	Porpolomopsis calyptriformis(2006)
Chrysomyxa pirolata	Psathyrella caput-medusae
Clavaria purpurea	Puccinia clintonii
Cotylidia pannosa (1912)	Puccinia physospermi
Entoloma bloxamii	Puccinia scorzoneri
Geastrum corollinum	Puccinia serpentrionalis
Geastrum berkeleyi	Puccinia thesii
Geastrum elegans	Sarcodon glaucopus
Geastrum minutum	Sarcodon imbricatus
Geoglossum atropurpureum(1873)	Sarcodon scabrosus
Gomphus clavus	Sarcodon squamosus
Hericium coralloides	Sarcodontia crocea
Hericium erinaceum	Sarcosphaera coronaria(1973)
Hohenbuehelia culmicola	Tephrocybe osmophora
Hydnellum aurantiacum	Tracya hydrocharidis
Hydnellum caeruleum	Tremellodendropsis tuberosa
Hydnellum conrescens (1880)	Tricholoma colossus
Hydnellum ferrugineum	Tricholoma robustum
Hydnellum peckii	Tulostoma melanocyclum
Hydnellum scrobiculatum	Tulostoma niveum
Hydnellum spongiosipes(2019)	Urocystis colchici
Hygrocybe spadicea(1905)	Urocystis gentianae
Hygrophorus pudorinus	Urocystis primulicola
Hypocreopsis lichenoides
Hypocreopsis rhododendri
